DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(e) the invention was described in (1) an application for patent, published under section 122(b), by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent or (2) a patent granted on an application for patent by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent, except that an international application filed under the treaty defined in section 351(a) shall have the effects for purposes of this subsection of an application filed in the United States only if the international application designated the United States and was published under Article 21(2) of such treaty in the English language.

Claims 31, 32, 35, 36 and 38 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(e) as being anticipated by Matushiita, of record, for the reasons given in the previous rejection, hereby incorporated by reference. Applicants have amended the claims and argue that Matushiita does not disclose an integrated circuit that includes a substrate such as single crystal silicon, nor does it disclose a semiconductor layer that includes one or more of recited types of semiconductor devices. While it is true that one of Matushiita's main embodiments is a solar cell device on a plastic substrate, nevertheless, Matushiita also discloses the inventive structure, as well. For example, at paragraph [0108] Matushiita describes a structure comprised of two silicon layers which are bonded together, and where one of the semiconductor layers may contain a large scale integrated circuit (LSI). In addition, at [0120] Matushiita further teaches that his earlier description of the formation of a solar cell may also apply to the formation of other devices and integrated circuits. As such, the formation of the other devices recited in claim 31 would inherently be included in Matushiita's disclosure. Every integrated circuit in the semiconductor art will, of necessity, include some of the types of devices included in claim 31. For example, every LSI circuit will include some transistors and passive devices such as resistors and capacitors. Since Matushiita does disclose the elements recited in claim 31, the rejection is proper.

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claims 37 and 40 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Matushiita in view of Sakaguchi et al, of record, for the reasons given in the previous rejection, hereby incorporated by reference. Contrary to applicants' arguments, Matushiita does show the main structural elements recited in claim 31, and consequently, Sakaguchi need not supply these elements. Sakaguchi does add the well known use of MOS devices, high k materials, and semiconductor layers formed in the claimed thickness range.

Claim 34 is rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Matushiita in view of Mizuno, of record for the reasons given in the previous rejection, hereby incorporated by reference. Mizuno also teaches the additional features of insulating regions which extend through the semiconductor layer.

THIS ACTION IS MADE FINAL. Applicant is reminded of the extension of time policy as set forth in 37 CFR 1.136(a).

A shortened statutory period for reply to this final action is set to expire THREE MONTHS from the mailing date of this action. In the event a first reply is filed within TWO MONTHS of the mailing date of this final action and the advisory action is not mailed until after the end of the THREE-MONTH shortened statutory period, then the shortened statutory period will expire on the date the advisory action is mailed, and any extension fee pursuant to 37 CFR 1.136(a) will be calculated from the mailing date of the advisory action. In no event, however, will the statutory period for reply expire later than SIX MONTHS from the mailing date of this final action.
